Silver Bullion

NEW YORK October 14 —The Post says Secretary of the Treasury Sherman today met by appointment the representative bullion brokers to confer as to the best method of buying silver bullion. It is understood that the plan will soon be adopted of the treasury inserting proposals to sell silver, and that purchases will be made from persons or firms making best offers to the secretary The latter had a conference with the members of the old 4½ per cent bond syndicate who urged upon him the advisability of paying the called 5 20 bonds not yet matured, amounting to $50,000 000, as fast as presented, with interest up to date of presentation The secretary holds the matter under consideration

NEW YORK, Oct 14th —Secretary Sherman has decided that hereafter silver bullion will be bought publicly from the best bid to supply it, the bidding to be open to all, and silver to be delivered at the mints

A Pattison Trick for Iowa.

WASHINGTON IOWA Oct 14 —The democrats and greenbackers of this district will hold a joint convention in Mt Pleasant next Tuesday to nominate a candidate for congress to be voted for at the November election They claim that other districts will do the same and that by uniting they can carry at least five out of nine districts They justify their action by the declaration that according to the act of the last congress the time for holding the congressional elections in this state is on the Tuesday after the first Monday of November

A Destructive Fire

PITTSBURG, Pa, Oct 14th —A special from Edinburg, Pa, gives the particulars of the destruction of that place by fire The fire broke out at half past 3 o clock, on Main street, spread rapidly It soon passed beyond control The loss is estimated from $350 000 to $400 000 It is largely insured 25 buildings were burned and the town almost completely destroyed There is much suffering among the losers

Not So Easy After All,

RICHMOND, Va Oct 14th —The grand jury in the United States District Court has reported indictments against between ninety and one hundred assignees in bankruptcy, who have failed for years 74, 75 76 '77 and 78 and for some one year or more of these years, to make annual report required by section 19 of amendatory act relating to proceedings in bankruptcy, approved January 22, 1874

Justice Meted out at Last

Don Cameron thinks the victory in Ohio was worth 10,000 republican votes in Pennsylvania.

The democratic congressional committee made arrangements for a grand jubilee last Tuesday night. A band and ball were engaged but sad to relate the returns were "not their way."

The Pueblo Democrat says "There is no longer any doubt but the Potter committee, inquiring into the late presidential steal, will strike rich pay dirt before many days." Does the Democrat refer to those cipher dispatches of Tilden where he tried to bribe the electors of Florida?

The opinion seems to be general that our congressional committee should be relieved of Gorham. His cheek is sending his own incoherent wandering remarks on the subject of finance at Patterson, New Jersey, to the applicants for the speeches of Schurz and President Hayes is exciting general indignation.

Secretary Schurz' speech is in such demand that the Republicans of Boston have printed a large edition. As the Congressional Committee are not furnishing these speeches, owing to the stupidity of Gorham, a bookseller in Washington is printing a large edition, of which five thousand have already been ordered.

The regular democracy is getting demoralized in Georgia. If good republicans are nominated, there is a fair chance for the election of two of them. The independent party among the democrats is growing. At least two independent democrats will be elected over the regular democratic nominees. "In regard to one of the doubtful districts the Atlanta Constitution says: "It is hinted that the republicans will nominate Andrew Sloan for Congress in the first district. In this event, if Cork-er [illegible] candidacy has any strength at all, there will be trouble in the district. It is the duty of Democrats at this juncture to present a solid front."

Bob Ingersoll says in his lecture on Burns that Dante, Petrarch and Milton were no poets. It is needless to say that these poets will never be read any more except as examples of the absurd taste of the literary people of the past three centuries. The New York Graphic commenting on the lecture says: "On hell and the democratic party Colonel Ingersoll is sure to be amusing even if he is irreverent. But when he leaves his beaten path, and walks a field into the domains of literature and art, he continues to make himself ridiculous and to make the more instructed of his audience laugh at him, when he imagines they are laughing with him."

The appointment of Capt. Jenks to a clerkship has been received with considerable criticism. The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial justifies the appointment, saying "Treasury officials say, with reference to the appointment of Captain Jenks to a temporary clerkship, that, first, nothing has ever been adduced to show that he is not morally fit; second, that he has clerical ability to warrant his employment; third, that he appears to have made a good record as a republican, and that, on account of his politics he is out of business; and, fourth, that it does not seem a peculiar hardship when a republican administration freely aided the southern people who have suffered from yellow fever, without regard to their politics, and including the bull-dozers at whose hands the friends of the party have suffered, that aid should be given to Captain Jenks, who has also suffered from yellow fever, his entire family having been down with it. Criticism of an act of humanity like this, under these circumstances is not graceful."

We have frequently seen the statement that the credit of the country was so bad before the war under a democratic administration that we paid as high as 12 per cent. for money. The following extract from a letter of Secretary Sherman gives the amount of the loans contracted by the democratic administration and the rate of interest, in the winter of 1860-61: "In reply thereto, I have to inform you that under the act of Dec. 17, 1860, (12 Stats. 121,) Treasury notes were issued redeemable at the expiration of one year from date, bearing interest as follows: $70,200 at 6 per cent., $65,000 at 9 per cent., $266,000 at 10½ per cent., $5,000 at 7 per cent., $10,000 at 9¼ per cent., $623,000 at 10¾ per cent., $24,500 at 8 per cent., $160,000 at 9½ per cent., $1,307,000 at 10¾ per cent., $55,000 at 8 per cent., $77,000 at 9¾ per cent., $1,432,700 at 11 per cent., $10,000 at 8¾ per cent., $1,027,500 at 10 per cent., $4,840,000 at 12 per cent., making a total of $10,010,000." We might also state that some of these treasury notes were negotiated at a discount of eleven per cent. What a comment on the relative effects of the two parties on the credit of the nation. Under the republican party, with a debt of over $2,000,000,000, the country borrows money at four per cent. in these hard times of 1878. In 1860 when all was flourishing with a democratic administration, and, we may say, no public debt, the country could with difficulty borrow money at 12 per cent. Yet there are some foolish people who want a change.

The Denver Times says, "when Colorado entered the family of the Union, State warrants sold for seventy-five cents on the dollar, and there were those who were not slow in predicting that they would depreciate to a much lower figure. The administration of our state affairs has, however, been so wise and economical, that instead of depreciating, they soon began to rise in the market, and to-day, for the first time, they sold at par. The state officers, as well as the party that has controlled the affairs of the state, have the right to congratulate themselves upon their good and successful management. Business is business, and the state warrants tell the whole story, refuting the claims of the demoralized partisan papers of corruption and extravagance in state affairs." The different papers in the state are discussing the reasons why Colorado went republican. We suggest the above as one of the reasons, taken in connection with the facts that the warrants of the republican banner county sold at par, while the warrants of the banner democratic county are hardly negotiable at 70 per cent. discount.

Professor Newcomb's recent address at St. Louis, on the relations of scientific investigation to theism, is receiving considerable criticism. In the opening of his address he claimed that the scientist deals exclusively with the "field of phenomena," cognizable by the senses, while the philosopher or theologian deals only in abstract thoughts and ideas. Hence he infers that the researches of the former are more accurate and exact than those of the latter. One critic of the above draws attention to the fact that Prof. Newcomb in another part of the same lecture refers again and again to the existence of forces and actions which have never been apprehended by the senses, as for example he says that "in the operations of the vital organism, the action of forces unknown to chemistry, must indeed be presupposed." Again, in speaking of the operations of nature, he says, as "the thinking man contemplates them he is led irresistibly to the conclusion that they do not go on at random, but that they are joined by connecting links. In the above Professor Newcomb depends entirely on those processes of the mind whose accuracy he impeached in the beginning of his address. But even in the observed phenomena he is obliged to use these same operations of the mind in making comparisons and deductions. He therefore is obliged to fall back upon those laws by which the mind works and in no sense can be called more accurate or exact than the metaphysician for both really are conducting their investigations under the same limitations, though one may proceed inductively and the other deductively.

The "Too Unanimous" Gorham

To other recent impertinences, Mr. Gorham, the secretary of the Republican Congressional Committee, has added the very flagrant one of responding to inquiries for the speech of Secretary Schurz at Cincinnati, by sending copies of his own delivered at Paterson, N. J. The speech of Mr. Schurz contains a sound and masterly exposition of Republican doctrine on the live political issues of the day. That of Mr. Gorham contains a travesty of the principles which have been formulated by the majority of Republican conventions, and is one of the weakest and most mischievous bids for the support of the Greenbackers which has been attempted by any Republican speaker during this campaign. Mr. Eugene Hale and those members of the committee who sympathize with the very just and statesmanlike views which he has expressed, ought to check the pestilent meddling of the "too unanimous" Gorham.

Mission of the Republican Party.

The mission of the republican party is not ended. It has done much. It has put down a vast rebellion, freed 4,000,000 slaves, and made a free Constitution, united the fragments of a shattered empire, managed war and finances to the amazement of mankind; it has carried railways over deserts and mountains to the Pacific Sea, it has made harbors, built breakwaters and light-houses, and established life-saving stations on perilous coasts; it has stretched out a net-work of signal service to give warning of storms on land and sea; it has cheapened foreign and domestic postage, founded a postal money order system, put post-offices on wheels, and doubled the cheapness and swiftness of transmitting intelligence; it has secured to every man who will have it, a homestead of 160 acres of fertile land; it has stood for free speech, free labor and free men always; it has upheld the public credit, and its aims have been those of humanity and right. Like every human agency, it has, no doubt, sometimes fallen into error, but its record is filled with great and useful achievement. Senator Conkling at Saratoga.

Hewitt on the Cipher Dispatches.

Abram S. Hewitt in conversation with a New York Tribune reporter on the cipher telegrams said:

"I can say for myself that I never knew anything about these dispatches. If the Tribune has genuine dispatches, and has translated them properly, it will be the political ruin of those persons who intended to perpetuate a fraud by them."

"Had you ever heard of their existence?" he was asked.

"One day in Washington, during the progress of the count, a prominent republican came to me and said that they were in possession of democratic cipher dispatches of a damaging character, and that if the democratic party undertook to invalidate the election of Mr. Hayes or to question his right to the presidential chair these dispatches would be published, and would have the effect at any rate of keeping Tilden out of the Presidential office. A hint of such dispatches came to me from another source. About the end of December or beginning of January, when William Orton, then president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, was charged with contempt for refusing to produce dispatches, he came to my house and dined with me. The object of his visit was to persuade me that it would be wise for the democrats not to compel him to deliver up the dispatches, and he assured me that they would lead to revelations of acts unknown to myself and other democrats, which would be very damaging to the democratic party. I thought his purpose was to keep from us dispatches proving republican iniquity. "What would you say," he said, "if I should show you one of those dispatches that I have in my pocket-book?" I told him that I did not want to see the dispatch, and that I should say he was violating his trust in showing it, or in having it so in his possession. "Well, I will read you this dispatch," he said, producing the cipher "and translation, and if you do not say that I came properly by it, I will go with you before the directors of the Western Union, and you may move for my discharge."

The dispatch he read to me had reference to negotiations for the democratic purchase of an electoral vote in South Carolina. I infer that the Tribune is going to publish the dispatches on that subject. If this particular one is among them I shall recognize it. After reading the dispatch Mr. Orton explained how it came into his possession. One evening, shortly before midnight, a prominent democratic politician received a cipher dispatch from South Carolina at the telegraph office in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He sat down at one of the tables, pulling out his key and made a translation of the cipher. A few minutes after midnight as the office was being closed he hastily gathered up a few papers and went out. His translation of the cipher happened to drop on the floor and the operator picked it up, read it, and immediately started for Mr. Orton's house with the cipher dispatch and translation, and rang up the president of the Western Union. Mr. Orton took the papers and told the operator to go home and never open his lips to a single human being in reference to the incident.

Schumann's Maxims.

Schumann tells the story of "The Old Captain," describing the presence in the Davidite circle of a veteran, who was reported to have begun the study of the piano late in life with the most difficult of Beethoven's sonatas, and to have practiced it in solitude for 10 years, alternately hoping and despairing He used to come to the Musical Evenings, and sit listening in a corner "I never," says Schumann, "played better or more gladly to any man than to him His presence was inspiring I mastered him, led him whither I would, and yet it seemed as if I received all my power from him." After a time he came no more But I will not spoil the pathetic end of the tale by fragmentary quotation. A contrast to this is the account of the artistic ball at the editor's, who invited young musicians, in order to get reviews out of them, here the writer hangs a charming little sketch on the simple incident of his getting engaged for the same dance to two of the editor's daughters In his maxims and aphorisms also, though too thorough a German always to avoid mistaking solemn commonplaces on the one hand and nebulous verbiage on the other, for wisdom and profundity, he has said many good things For instance, "One voice that blames has the strength of ten that praise " "He who sets limits to himself, will always be expected to remain within them." "The saying 'I have thrown it in the fire,' is often but a shameless boast. I detest people who throw their compositions in the fire " "He who is anxious to preserve his originality is in danger of losing it. " The great is admirable even in ruin Dismember a symphony by Beethoven and one by Gyrowetz and then observe what remains Works of mere talent or compilation when destroyed seem but overturned card houses, while after the expiration of centuries, pillars and capitals of ruined temples still exist" Macmillan's Magazine.

A colored Georgia minister preaches the following practical theology. "Breddren, my sperience is dat it ain't de perfession of ligion, but de casional practice of it dat makes a man ceptable up yonder. Wen yer gets to de golden gate an' Peter looks yer right in de eye and yer shows him yer long creed and says, pompous like, dat yer longed to a big church, de 'postle ll shake his head an' say, 'Dat ain't nuff to get yer through.' But if yer takes all yer bills under yer arm, yer grocer bills an' yer rent bills, an' he looks 'em over an' finds 'em all receipted, he'll say, 'Yas [illegible], an' unfurl ue gate an' let yer pitch yer voice for de angels' song. But 'taint no use ter gabbel along dat narrer path 'less yer [illegible] up in yer creed, a good recommendation from yer creditors. Hebben ain't no place for a man who has to dodge roun' a corner fur fear ob meetin' some one who'll ask fur ask for dat little bill dat nebber was paid.'

"Is there a letter here for me?" asked an ancient female of a postoffice employe yesterday. Inquiring her name the obliging clerk answered. "Yes, mam, nine cents postage due on it, too." "Yes, sir. Would you be so good as to read it for me?" The obliging clerk opened the billet, which proved to be eleven pages of foolscap, and after patiently wading through it, the old lady drew a long breath, and remarking, "All right, young man, I don't believe I will take it," walked out, leaving the astonished clerk with the voluminous document and a nine-cent postage bill on his lily-white hands. Cincinnati Breakfast Table.

Mr. Stettell's two houses on Weber street are up and partly enclosed.

Mr. Arnold sold the building where is located Haffner's harness shop, to Wm. Neill.

Carpenters are in demand here now, and are likely to be for some time to come, at good wages.

J. Q. Adams, who is with O. T. Barker, has purchased a residence of Mr. Hopkins, and will occupy it soon.

Col. John H. Bacon was one of the time keepers at the great race at Chicago between Rarus and Hopeful last week.

J. H. Woodgate will to-day remove his stock of boots and shoes to his new room in Union block, and L. Haffner will shortly occupy the room vacated by Mr. W.

One day last week some malicious person set fire to a lot of ties, on the Divide, that were gotten out for the D. & R. G. by Calvin Jeffrey, and over a hundred were destroyed.

We have been informed that there is a large prairie fire out east of here. It is [illegible] that the range of Capt. [illegible] has been burned, but we trust it will not be [illegible].

The corps of engineers who are surveying [illegible] line for the A., T. & S. F. [illegible] from Pueblo to Denver, have [illegible] City, [illegible] which [illegible].

Frank Pierson, R. B. Madison and Geo. Reed, all "gentlemen of color," indulged in a [illegible] Saturday, for which they were hauled for $5.00 and costs each, by Justice Smith, on yesterday.

The committee appointed by the grand jury, from among its number, to examine the county treasurer's books and accounts, consists of Messrs. E. S. Joslyn, A. F. Goodrich and C. [illegible].

We had the pleasure of a call yesterday from Captain J. T. Smith, managing editor of the Rocky Mountain News. He is taking a little rest by a trip to the southern part of the state, after the arduous labors of the late "unpleasantness."

The Christian Temperance Union will meet in County Library rooms this evening, at 7½ o'clock, for the semi-annual election of officers. It is urged upon all members to be present.

J. W. WOODGATE, Sec'y.

Sam Rice, the cattle herder who resisted Officer Dana when the latter arrested him, the 4th of July last, is on hand, ready for trial. Rice claims that if he had known at the time that Dana was an officer he would have given up without any resistance.

It will be noticed in another column that our affable merchant, Mr. Thomas Tribe, had a well defined purpose in view in going to England. We sincerely join his host of friends herein their congratulations.

Rev. C. A. Brooks, of Fort Collins, reports that about four months ago a team of horses strayed away from his premises, and he was unable to find them until recently. He found the team in the possession of Mr. Anthony at Florissant, who had taken them up and neglected the little legal formality of advertising the same.

Dr. Huntingdon, of Des Moines, and Dr. Blake of this city have opened an office in the rooms 10 and 12 Union Block. Dr. Huntingdon is an old practitioner of thirty years' experience. He came here for his health, but has so much improved that he has brought his family and intends to stay. Dr. Blake has been here for some time and is too well known to require any introduction to our people.

Marcus E. Jones, of Grinnell, Iowa, a graduate of Iowa College, and a botanist of considerable reputation, came to Colorado last May in the employ of a German company of Vienna for the purpose of collecting the various varieties of the flora of the Rocky Mountains. Mr. Jones spent considerable time in this vicinity, and is well satisfied with his summer's work, having gathered 800 varieties, 30 of which are new discoveries, and 25,000 specimens of the flora of Colorado. Before leaving for the east he presented the Denver Museum with 100 books of specimens, containing from 12 to 50 specimens each.

Messrs Whipple & Eaton report that they have completed the lower wall of the reservoir, and are now at work on the inner wall, and are placing about fifty perch of stone per day. Owing to a change of original plan, the walls are to be eight feet lower than at first announced. According to the present plan, the reservoir will hold 3,000,000 gallons of water probably quite as much as will be needed there at any one time during the next ten years. At any time it is found necessary, the capacity of the reservoir can be increased by building the walls higher.

A fire was started last night in the GAZETTE office by the breaking of a lamp. Fortunately it was immediately put out. But little damage was done except that done by an officious blunderbuss who rushed in after the fire was nearly out and pied three large forms. He reminded us very much of the man at a fire who threw the looking-glasses out of the window and carried the feather beds down stairs carefully in his arms. Mr. Bolton now wants to know who is to settle the bill of $25.00 for the pied forms, and possible another $25.00 for damaged type. If we could describe the man we would do so, so as to warn people in case they have a fire. He is a very dangerous man. We are sincerely thankful that the fire did not get under headway, for with the wind it would have been fearful.

A Safe Business.

During the last month Mr. J. W. Adams, agent for this state for the celebrated Mosler Safe & Lock Co., has received orders for, and delivered to banks and business houses, lawyers, physicians and others, no less than seventeen of the Mosler safes, and has also received three orders from banks for the Yale and Sargent Time Locks. He has just ordered a Mosler No. 5 for A. V. E. Stettell of this city. Parties wishing to purchase the best safe in the world will consult their interest by addressing J. W. Adams, 390 Larimer street, Denver, or at Colorado Springs.

[illegible]

Whipple & Eaton will begin immediately the following building improvements: sixteen rooms on the front of the Spaulding house. This will bring the front of the building to the edge of the street.

Six rooms on the north end of the Howard [illegible], Cascade avenue.

Two [illegible] to Mr. Bennell's residence [illegible] Weber street [illegible].

[illegible] and counting room to the rear of the El Paso county bank buildings, size 18½x32 feet. The latter is well under way, and all are to be completed within sixty days.

In addition to the above we are pleased to announce that Alderman Walker will erect a two-story brick building, east of his billiard hall on Pike's Peak avenue. It will be 74x90 feet in size, substantially built and tastefully finished. According to the design shown us, by S. F. Sessions, who is to do the wood work, the front will will be quite ornamental. The brick work will be done by Wm. Saxon.

A [illegible] Wedding.

It is a rare occasion when a man and woman live to celebrate the 60th anniversary of their marriage. The New York Tribune in a pleasant article a few days ago announced that Joseph and Rebecca Taylor of Chester county, Pennsylvania, would celebrate their "Diamond Wedding" on October 15th (to-day.) This aged couple are the parents of Bayard Taylor, the poet and the present minister of the United States to Germany.

They were married in 1818 and on October 15th, 1868, the "golden" anniversary of their marriage was observed at Cedar Cliff, Penn., Mr. Bayard Taylor's country home, where his parents now reside. On that occasion there was a large gathering of friends and connections, and a drama, written by Bayard Taylor and R. H. Stoddard, was acted by the two poets and some friends, and poems were read by Taylor, Stoddard, and Boker. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, whose unusual fortune it has been to live together as man and wife for sixty years, are still in vigorous health, and it is not improbable that they may yet live to unite in another anniversary a decade hence. One of the daughters of these good people the wife of Col. Chas. B. Lamborn is a resident of our city.

A Large Stock and a Fine Display.

Yesterday afternoon our reporter was shown through the clothing house of E. Leonard & Co., by a member of the firm. In the way of underwear, furnishing goods and clothing this house is said to equal any between St. Louis and San Francisco, both in the extent of their stock and the quality of their goods. Everything a man or boy may want to cover his body or adorn his person except boots or shoes may be had at E. Leonard & Co's. The stock embraces many articles of men's and boys wear which have never before been sold in this market. A special attraction if indeed any difference in the various departments can be noted is the large display of underwear, which runs all the way from $7,00 to 70 cents per suit. In the line of clothing the showing is quite surprising to one not acquainted with the extent of this firm's immense stock, while the exhibit of hats and caps, caps the climax, and as many more are on the way. The firm deserves and receives a large patronage.

RANCHING IT!

The Southern Part of El Paso County.

Fountain to Chico Brakes.

A third article on "the Divide" we sent by a courier who proved unworthy of the trust, which will necessitate a brief review of the same in this article. One and a half miles south of Monument we came to the Guire ranch, owned and occupied by Jos. Guire, esq. There are 180 acres, all enclosed. The house is a large well built one, within a short distance of which is a large barn and other outbuildings. Mr. Guire gives his entire attention to agriculture. During the past year he has harvested seventeen acres of wheat, oats, rye, barley and peas. He has a few head of stock, among which are seven head of horses.

Two miles farther south we come to Borstville, a station on the D. & R. G. railway. A short distance west of this is Levi Welty's place. Here he has 320 acres of land, 180 of which is enclosed. During the past season he has raised thirty acres of wheat, the same quantity of oats, and fifteen acres of millet and potatoes. He has twelve head of cattle and seven head of horses. A few rods to the west of this place is the Welty Brothers' place. They have also 320 acres and have raised the past year eighteen acres of wheat, fifteen of oats and ten of millet. They own 125 head of cattle and thirty head of horses. The farmers on the Divide, very generally report their wheat crops to have been considerably damaged by rust, the result of which is a light crop. Taken all together, however, there is no portion of Colorado so well adapted to agriculture as that on the slopes of the Divide. The country is being settled up rapidly, and we shall look to the Divide for great things in this line.

At 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning last, we started on our fourth trip at "Ranching it." Delightful weather and good spirits augured well for a pleasant journey. A drive of ten miles brought us to the residence of C. A. Lansing, esq. Finding that gentleman at home and receiving from him an invitation to dinner, we were only too glad to accept it, as our brisk drive had given us a large quantity of appetite. We preferred the dinner with a look around the ranch. The house contains four rooms, and is plastered throughout, making it warm and comfortable for winter use. Within a few rods of the house is the barn and other outbuildings. Mr. Lansing owns 2,960 acres all enclosed. From a very small portion of this he has raised during the past year 150 bushels of oats, 100 bushels of corn and 30 tons of hay. He has at present but a few head of cattle but it is his intention to stock his place with them in the spring. The Widefield irrigating ditch runs through his place, giving him an abundant water supply.

At 1 o'clock p. m. we started for Fountain, which place we reached at 2 o'clock. We found it to be a delightfully located little town, situated in the valley of the Fountain, but no place for newspaper men. Some three or four weeks since it was "done" by a fellow, who represented himself as a canvasser and correspondent of the Denver News, to the extent of a twenty-five dollar overcoat and the price of several subscriptions. Since then the people look upon newspaper representatives with a suspicious eye, but nevertheless when it became known that we did not wish to borrow any overcoats our reception was very cordial.

Remaining over night in Fountain, we started the next day for Counselman & Co.'s ranch. We found this to be located at Chico Brakes, some twelve miles from Fountain. Here we found our old friend Charlie Fenn, in the capacity of "boss man," and from him we received such a greeting as one likes to think of, and makes a man think more of himself after receiving. The cordial "how are you, old boy," and the hearty clasp of the hand, always speak more than a volume when uttered between friends. We accepted his invitation to remain over night, so putting out our horses, we repaired to the "office" for a quiet chat. After a most excellent supper, to which we did full justice, we "turned in" for a full night's rest, but in the morning we awoke to the realization that something was the matter and found that our old-time enemy, the rheumatism, had paid us a visit. "Doctor" Charlie fixed up a vile mixture of vinegar and red pepper, with which he rubbed the affected parts till our skin was on the point of leaving our body. It had the desired effect, however, and discharging our physician, we went to work.

The ranch has a good location very desirable for sheep raising. The house is built of hewn logs, and contains three rooms and a loft. Within a short distance of the house is the barn, the largest by the way we have seen on any ranch. It has accommodation for eight horses, and will hold from fifteen to twenty tons of hay. It is well built and very comfortable. Adjoining the barn are the corrals, of which there are four. These are ample and well arranged. They are built of tight boards seven feet high, forming an excellent protection from the cold wind and storms. They have recently been whitewashed, and present a very neat and tidy appearance. There is also a tight shed 200x35 feet. They have at present 4500 head of sheep, consisting of 2,700 ewes and lambs, and 1800 wethers. These are all in fine condition, and have every indication for wintering favorably. They are of the first, second and third cross Merinos, with a strain of Cotswold. The 3600 head which were sheared, netted over 16,000 pounds of wool. This was shipped to Lewis & Tuttle, of Chicago. No returns have been received as yet. The range which is controlled by this ranch extends for thirteen miles north and south, and is twelve miles wide. Aside from the home ranch they have four other ranches. All over the range the feed is of the best quality; namely, gramma grass, and the water supply unlimited. At the home ranch they have dipping works, in fact all the appurtenances to a first-class sheep ranch. We understand that the place is for sale, owing to the inability of the proprietors to give it the attention it needs. It is certainly a very desirable piece of property, but a few hours drive from Colorado Springs, and in every way adapted for successful sheep culture.

TENDERFOOT.

Court Items

The fall term of the El Paso county circuit court began on Monday at 9 o'clock, Judge John W. Henry on the bench, Prosecuting Attorney John M. Waldron, Circuit Clerk A. S. Welsh, and Sheriff Peter Becker, at their posts of duty.

The business of yesterday was confined to the consideration of motions and other preliminary work. To-day petit jurors will be secured, and the regular routine work will be begun. The docket will be called at the opening of court, 9 o'clock this forenoon.

The following gentlemen compose the grand jury. E. S. Joslyn, Austin Hutchinson, A. F. Goodrich, Adney Hemmenway, Anthony Bott, W. H. Barbour, Benj. S. Hall, John Murphy, M. A. Foster, W. C. Bradbury, Fred. Conant, Geo Summers. The jury has been sworn, and will immediately proceed to business.

The Escaped Convicts.

It seems that the suppositions were correct that the Miller-McCarty outfit would come this way. Word was brought to Sheriff Becker on Sunday that Miller and the Italian had been caught, and also that McCarty had been traced up to the Little Fountain. The particulars as far as we could them were as follows: Miller and the Italian were traveling together about dusk Saturday evening, and came to Jeff Steele's ranch. They entered the house, helped themselves to the provisions, and taking considerable clothing and some blankets with them repaired to the side of a hill near by. Here they were engaged in changing their clothing and rolling up the blankets when the sheriff's posse from Canon City espied them without being detected. The posse immediately scattered about the hill and completely surrounded it. While Charles Dupers was advancing from his station he was seen by Miller, who fled with the Italian to the other side of the hill, where they were met by two men who had the drop on them. Both threw up their hands and were again taken into custody.

Jerry McCarty was about ten or fifteen miles in the rear of Miller behind even the pursuers. He was taking his trip very leisurely. On Saturday evening he called at a ranch and asked for some bread, which was furnished him. He then hid himself near by and waited until nearly midnight. Then he went into the cellar of his benefactor, drank about a gallon and a half of milk and took what eatables he could lay his hands on. He then went to the barn and stole a horse. From another ranch near by he stole a bridle and saddle. Thus equipped he started in this direction and must have traveled until nearly daylight. He was traced to Fountain and then in the direction of the mountains, where his trail was lost. Evidently he had come in this direction until nearly daylight when he turned off into the mountains for safety.

These particulars were given to Sheriff Becker on Sunday, who started for Bear Creek canon to intercept him but was too late. The footprints of the horse were recognized by the man from whom Jerry stole him. There is no further trace of McCarty up to this time. He is so shrewd and desperate that it will require all the nerve and caution of our officers to take him. Until he is taken we may say no man's property is safe.

Personal.

Judge J. W. Henry and District Attorney Waldron are stopping at the Crawford.

Major R. L. Hopkins, formerly of the Manitou House, is a guest at the Springs Hotel.

Rev. E. J. Huren, wife and son, who registered here from India, left yesterday for Canon City.

Chas. Cavender, a former resident of this city, and now an attorney at Leadville, is in the city.

W. H. Ballaw, of Ramsey, Mellett, Hudson & Co., publishers, Kansas City, is stopping at the National.

C. H. Starkey spent the Sabbath in town. He has changd his postoffice address from Monument to Southwater.

Mrs. Elliott, whose husband was killed by the Indians in Middle Park, a few weeks ago, is stopping at the Central.

W. J. Wilson, the noted cattle man, and C. E. Tappan, the equally noted sheep man, the former of Denver, the latter of Pueblo, are registered at the Colorado Springs Hotel.

Sergeant Hobbs went north yesterday, taking with him a gun, from which one might conclude that he is on the war path.

Rev. J. A. Stayt, Wm. Bush, Mr. Beavers and Chas. Stayt, boarded a wagon yesterday and left for a week's hunt and a trip on the Platte.

Mr. James Kiln, after an absence of nearly four years, came in on yesterday evening's train, and is the guest of James Somerville. During the evening he was serenaded by the cornet band, of which he is a member. Mr. Kiln was among the first settlers in Colorado Springs, and his many friends throughout the state will be glad to learn of his return.
